Wireless transmitter

Setcom Corporation has significantly upgraded its Waterproof Liberator Wireless Transmitter. Law enforcement officers ride motorcycles in a variety of inclement conditions that often involve exposing their communications equipment to significant amounts of moisture. A significant amount of engineering resources were put behind making the handlebar transmitter enclosure and switch boot conform to the IP-X8 standard, which means that it can be held at a depth of 1 meter underwater for one hour without significant water incursion. In addition, the system now allows 1,024 simultaneous riders in close proximity without interference.
